

FREDDIE SCOTT, II

Former NFL wide receiver for the Atlanta Falcons and Indianapolis Colts, Freddie Scott II is the author of “The Dad I Wish I Had” and the host of the Freddie Scott Radio Show “Tackling the Game of Life”. He has appeared numerous times on CNN, HLN, Fox News, TBN and Family Life, providing expert opinion and practical keys to success on family matters, character development and conflict resolution.

As a certified NFL Transition Coach and a leading member of the NFL Player Engagement’s Ambassador program, Scott travels the nation conducting seminars and trainings on behalf of the NFL. His Champions@Home for the NFL Player Association is one of the most requested workshops.

Scott’s mission is to help players, coaches and NFL executives gain insights and tools to be better husbands and fathers. He uses a total wellness approach for achieving one’s life goals.

Scott has been a dedicated advocate for “turning the hearts of fathers towards their children” for more than seven years. Since 2009, he has served as a spokes person for Tony Dungey’s All Pro Dad. In 2012, he founded the non-profit Unlock the Champion, an outreach program to the fatherless youths in his community.

For his courageous work to bridge the gap in social equality and for overcoming personal challenges, Scott has been awarded the 2013 Kenny Washington Award by the NFL.

Most recently, NFL has tapped Scott to launch initiatives on domestic violence awareness, suicide prevention and “Mental Health First Aid.
